Just How the Administration is Regarded by the Men Who Brought the Party Into Power.

The Chronicle-Telegraph, of Pittsburg, which is a republican journal of the most pronounced type, created a political sensation by coming out with a broadside calculated to demonstrate that President Harrison has not made good use of his opportunities, and that there is widespread discontent in the republican party owing to his actions. The paper prints dispatches from seventeen leading states showing the condition of republican affairs and the trouble that has arisen from the distribution of patronage.

The list opens with New York, and the "most aggrieved man in the state" is declared to be Warner Miller. The president's reference to the "gallant leader who fell outside the breastworks" is recalled, and the manner in which Mr. Harrison left him outside those same "breastworks" detailed. Reference is made, then, to the fact that the Platt influence was also disregarded, particularly in the matter of the naval office and the Elmira postmastership, in which instances both his candidates failed. But Warner Miller and his friends, it is asserted, have been shown no consideration at all.

The writer thus concludes: "Next to resentative Mckinley is credited with being the administration candidate for speaker. Mckinley was among the indorsers of Alphonso Hart for the position of solicitor to the internal revenue department, a place which Mr. Quay had promised to Frank Gilkeson, Gilkeson has since been made comptroller of the currency, but that has not altered Quay's feelings toward Mckinley. With a view to "evening" himself with the Ohio leader and at the same time striking a blow at the administration, in the striking a McKinley. With a view to "evening" himself with the Ohio leader and at the same time striking a blow at the administration, Senator Quay will lead part of the Pennsylvania delegation against McKinley in the interest of his most dangerous opponent, Mr. Reed of Maine. This is the first assault. Administration measures need not look for much encouragement at the hands of the senators from Pennsylvania during the coming session. the coming ses

In Missouri the status of the majority of the political leaders with the present administration is declared a little mixed. One after another of them has been "turned after another of them has been "turned down" by the president until they are uncertain just where they stand. There is only one man who knows what to expect at the hands of President Harrison, and that man is Secretary Noble. And Secretary Noble's appointment to the place he holds in the cabinet was more personal than political. The fact is cited that John B. Henderson, a man of large wealth and influence and who raised sinews of war for use in Indiana, was repeatedly snubbed, until in disgust he was moved to say he had no influence at all with the administration and washed his hands of further interference with Missouri appointments. Even the influence of P. washed his hands of further interference with Missouri appointments. Even the influence of R. C. Kerens, of St. Louis, the mysterious "friend of Blaine," is on the wane, and the Blaine people are "sore" in consequence. The manner in which the president ignored Congressman Frank and Congressman Neidringhaus, of St. Louis, and the dissatisfaction resulting is re-

The Indiana republican who has the greatest cause to complain of the way the administration has acted in the matter of offices is Treasurer Huston, and to those that know him well it would not be at all that know him well it would not be at all surprising if Mr. Huston retired to private life before many months have passed. Newspaper readers are familiar with the causes leading to the coldness between Huston and the president. The climax came about six weeks ago, when Mr. Huston's recommendation in the matter of a fourth-class postofice in a democratic district was disregarded. Mr. Huston is inclined to be extremely dispusted, as he claims that his disregarded. Mr. Huston is inclined to be extremely disgusted, as he claims that his work during the campaign entitles him to the distribution of this patronage during the term of President Harrison. What angers him more than anything else is the constant recognition of Attorney-General Miller, who contributed $1,000 to the campaign fund, where Mr. Huston, street recognition fund, where Mr. Huston stood responsible at one time for $30,000. Congressman Cheadle, of the ninth district, and Congressman Owen, of the tenth, are also at odds with the president from their own states—the former because of failure to secure postmasters at Kokom, and Layfayette, and the latter because he was refused as much patronage for his friends as had been given the democrats.

The delegation from Kansas has been at war with some of the departments almost since the day of the inauguration—first with the state department and then with it necessary for a senator of the United States to lay aside his dignity, take off his coat and vest and rush into a fight for small patronage.

The two senators from Colorado have been in an ugly mood several times, and it will not take very much to cause an open outbreak. Their first cause of complaint was the delay in the appointment of a land commissioner. They were extremely anxious that ex-Goy. Stone of their state should receive it, but he didn't. They have had other troubles since.

The Nebraska scantors have only one com-

other troubles since.

The Nebraska schators have only one complaint against the president, and that hinges on the appointment of Patrick Egan to be minister to Chili. They were against him, but indorsed him "by request."

The republicans of Virginia are divided into two factions and, of course it is impossible to reconcile the views of both to the appointments the president may make. As might be expected, therefore, the administration is not in perfect ha mony with that republican party of the old dominion.

The complaint constantly made during the distribution of Montana offices was the Russel B. Harrison and the Helena Daily Journal had more influence with the president than all the leaders of the republican party put together. This has estranged many former friends of the administration Considering the number and character of the internal complications in the republicant party of Ohio, it is surrorising than

Considering the number and character of the internal complications in the republi-can party of Ohio, it is surprising that there has not been some serious outbreak; but Sherman and Foraker and McKinley have tacitly agreed to keep their family difficulties within the state bounds. All that the Ohioans complain of is that they have not had enough.

In Texas, Iowa, Maine, Arkansas and Vermont no portentious discontent has been found.

The simplificance of the Telegraph's at

The significance of the Telegraph's attack lies in the fact that it is an anti-Quay republican journal. It is not denied that Quay is mad at Harrison's procrastinating methods, and this deliverance of a party journal which "trains" with another seems to indicate that the Magee or anti-Quay people propose to make it interesting for the administration, too.

have been shown no consideration at all.

The writer thus concludes: "Next to Warner Miller, the man who has been most thoroughly ignored by the administration is Representative Farquhar of Buffalo. He came in the spring with a slate bearing the names of thirteen candidates for various offices. They were unkindly treated. Only one of them has obtained recognition, and that one is W. W. Bates, recently appointed commissioner of navigation. Even Mr. Farquhar's recommendations for local offices have been disregarded."

In Pennsylvania both the United States senators are declared to be out with the administration. Senator Quay is especially Philadelphia Press: The tall, handsome senators are declared to be out with the administration. Senator Quay is especially unhappy over his treatment by the president because of his claim for work in the campaign. Quay's friends do not hesitate to say that he is going to concentrate all his strenght this winter in obtaining recognition for some of his friends from the senate, "because," as they say, "he cannot get all he wants from the administration." It is understood that he and Senator Cameron have agreed to a combination to oust Mr. Canaday from his position as sergeant at arms of the senate, and to have William R. Leeds elected to the place. Mr. Leeds has nothing to expect at the hands of the administration; that is clear.

The patronage of Pennsylvania is in the hands of Postmaster General Wanamaker. A sufficient evidence of that was the appointment of John Field to be postmaster at Philadelphia, a place Leeds wanted. The Coal of the Rockies,

At the meeting of the New York Academy of Science, held at Columbia college, Professor Newbery described the Laramie group, a formation not yet thoroughlystudied, but perhaps of greater economic importance than any other to the inhabitants of the Rocky Mountain region, by reason of its vast deposits of excellent coal, some of which surpasses in quality the anthracite of Penasylvania. The intrinsic value of these deposits is vastly enhanced by the lack of other available fuel in this treeless region, where it sometimes happens that first the furniture and then the houses

The coal formations cover an area of 100,000 miles, againit 200,000, the extent of the eastern carboniferous deposits, They are not like the eastern deposits, of the carboniferous, but of the cretaceous age, The Laramie group underlies the territory,

The Laramie group underlies the territory, and is of the same geological formation as the Puget Sound formation, which also abounds in coal. Beneath it are successively the Colorado, the Dakota and the Comanche group. The oil and gas of these regions is mostly contained in the Colorado group. The coal of the Laramie group has not in all places been subjected to ingenious metamorphic agencies. Hence some of the deposits are liable to crack and crumble after being mined and exposed to the atmos-

This gave a bad repu-tation to to this coal till it was found that at other points it had been hardened by contact with emptive volcanic dykes and rendered an admirable coking coal. The Laramie strata extend from beyond' the Canadian frontier to Chihuahua or be-low, in Mexico, and cover the vast basin from the western slope of one of the Rocky Mountain ranges to the Wahsatch range, where cap that most picturesque of all mountain ranges, clear to the line where it ends in an immense fall, which gives that range its sharp and steep western front, falling off precipitously 7,000, 8,000 feet thick.

The fossils include many broad-leaved trees, one of the palms having a leaf ten feet in width, also a remarkable and formidable looking reptile called ceratops, with head seven feet long, and immense horns and spikes behind much like these of the little horned lizard of Mexico.

What on Earth

One of the warmest fights yet made over the distribution of patronage is now any waged in Illimois over the apport agent of five local federal officers in Chicago. Not only Senator Farwell and Senator Cullom, but all the members of congress from that part of the state are in arms against the president. It is argued that this cannot fail to do the party harm.

The two Michigan senators are declared to be unhappy. They were amazed and disgusted when they found that senatorial requests were selling at a heavy discount, and that persistent effort alone was awarded with political patronage. It is for this reason that Senator McMillen is not a constant visitor at the executive mansion and
